"THE CITY in BRIEF" COLUMN....

Feb. 26th, 1892

Thomas Lindy was arrested and brought down from Walcott several weeks ago, and placed in the jail. After a while he was taken sick with fever and was removed to the hospital, where he died last Monday night, and was buried on Wednesday.

William Farley was employed four days last week to take care of him. This gave Mr. Farley a chance to learn something of the hospital, and the attention given to sick people who are taken there. Now, if you wish to know whether there is any attempt to keep the room for the sick clean and cheerful, ask Mr. Farley....

If you wish to know how long that room was allowed to go without artificial heat, ask Mr. Farley....

If you wish to know why the hired master of the house, with clenched fist, swore at the young man, who was fast approaching death's door, ask Mr. Farley....

If you wish to know that there was not a morsel of food in the house for the sick man to eat, ask Mr. Farley....

If you wish to know how many thousand hospital pets were allowed to occupy the bed with the sick man, ask Mr. Farley....

If you wish to know how many of those pets had become tired of hospital fare, and managed to leave and go home with him by stealing a ride in the wrinkles of his shirt, ask Mr. Farley....

If you want to know whether or not there is any probability that one in every one hundred sick persons who may be taken to the hospital for treatment, will ever get away from there alive, ask Mr. Farley....

WEDDING BELLS

PEALED FORTH IN MERRIEST ACCENTS ON MONDAY EVENING.....

As it were moded especially into April's most sublime day, Monday's brilliant sunshine seemed to be propitious for the expression: "Springtime comes young men's fancies lightly turn to thoughts of love."

All nature was wreathed in the habiliments of almost celestial splendor from early dawn until the Sun's rays last cast their sparkling outlines upon a western horizon. Hankinson and vicinity and especially fair sex, were astir in anticipation of the marriage of two of our most popular young people.

Miss Elnora Russell, an accomplished lady who has been for years one of Richland County's highly prized and progressive school teachers and a gem in society and Mr. A. G. Divet, one of our most enterprising and prosperous young agriculturist. At an early hour in the evening the town took on an appearance of briskness especially were uniquely fitted, in which the ceremonies were to be held and as the scribe entered the hall, his journalistic optics met a display of ornamentations and decorations that would have done credit to any large city's similar effort.

At the west end of the hall an ideal wedding tryst was arranged handsomely with evergreens, overhanging in the center of which hung a beautiful wedding bell of evergreens trimmed with calla lillies.

At the appointed hour, 8:30 o'clock, a hollow square of young ladies and gentlemen was formed and the wedding party moved slowly and with much dignity, forward to the tryst. The bride was assisted by Miss May Ridgway of Great Bend, while Mr. F. A. Russel, brother of the bride, did courtesy to the groom. A silence pervaded the hall as the Rev. D. T. Jenkins stepped forward and in eloquent language performed the ceremony, after which the vast assemblage of relatives and friends pressed forward and hearty congratulations were extended the young couple.

The costume of the bride was simply exquisite and in fact the toilets of the whole party were neat, tasty and appropriate.

After the ceremony an informal reception and banquet was held with R. H. Hankinson as master of ceremonies.

The several tables were laden with edibles that would have tempted the epicurean dreams of the gods embellished amid fragrance of magnificent decorations of flowers. The bride and groom sat at the table of honor and after the hosts had partaken of the tempting spread the toast master arose and called upon H. Sprague to respond to the toast...."Is Marriage a Failure?"

"What constitutes a model wife?" was responded to by F. G. Merrick. "What constitutes a model husband?" was responded to by Mrs. H. Sprague. "What is home without a baby?" responded by Dr. Spottswood and H. A. Alm. "Are bachelors to be pitied?" was responded to by J. R. Jones.

"What induced him to marry?" was responded to by the groom in a very neat speech. Mr. B. W. Ridgeway of Great Bend responded pleasantly to a toast tendered him.

There were several other toasts which were not responded to. All of the speakers made hits and displayed more than ordinary ability as after dinner speakers.

The evening was enlivened by exhilarating strains of sweet music from Prof. Gollnick's cornet band.

The whole affair was a grand success and the hundreds who attended were unsparing of praise. The social sentiments displayed are sure bulwarks toward the stability of Hankinson's future and the News feels rejoiced and extends its congratulations to the participants especially to the bride and groom and that their pathway of connubiality may be strewn with happiness and their hacienda be always surrounded with sentiments fraught with peace, love and contentment.

The kind remembrances of the bride's friends were numerous and costly of which the following is a list: Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Merrick, Charles Hein and wife, B. F. Thomas and wife, H. A. Alm and wife, Walter Andrews and wife, E. H. Cornell and wife, C. P. Spottswood and wife, Wm. Ranger, R. B. Willard, O. M. Hatcher, F. W. CHRISTINA GOT THERE....

Miss Christina Stohl, a pretty rose cheeked and luscious German maiden, who came to American quite young, some time last year, being anxious to keep in memory the scenes of the land of her nativity, left her home at Plymouth, Indiana and sailed across the seas, no doubt thinking that it being leap year she would choose from the thousands of young healthy German lads a husband before her return. However this may have been, notwithstanding she recently turned her face toward the setting sun again and came back home still a blushing lass yet unmarried.

On her journey to and from the land of Bismarcks, she learned of the financial ingenuity of americans in conducting matrimonial agencies where marriages are contracted on the "get you a wife while you wait" style and she resorted to this means of securing a husband. In due course of time she was introduced through the agency, to Christian Steger, a prosperous farmer living close to LaMoure, ND., about sixty miles north west from Hankinson, a bachelor who owned 160 acres of Dakota's fertile soil. Their correspondence soon ripened into business for Christina had traveled and had an eye to business and she secured an agreement from her strange correspondent to transfer to her the 160 acres, provided she would marry him. He, it seems, was stricken with that fatal disease "love at first sight" and succumbed to her overtures. She at once left her Indiana home and in due time landed at LaMoure, and now she is Mrs. Christina Steger and happy, no doubt cherishing the idea that ere the silvery lines encompass her brow she may be surrounded by a dozen or more little Christina's.

Blue Earth City, MN., July 10th.....at 6 o'clock last evening Fred Schultz was shot by his stepbrother, August L. Gehrke, and died in less than an hour. This was the first murder ever committed here and caused intense excitement.

The murder was the result of a family quarrel over children, and evidence produced before the grand jury this morning shows that it was a cold-blooded deed and almost unprovoked.

It appears also that Gehrke had before made threats against Schultz. The latter was a section hand and had a wife and three children. Gehrke keeps a billiard hall, has a wife and an adopted child.

The state of Minnesota was disgraced last Saturday night by the lynching of the two murderers of Sheriff Rogers, of McLeod County. The murder was committed in June, the men captured and the trial of one, Musgrove, was terminated last week, resulting in a verdict of murder in the second degree, while the trial of the other man, Cinq Mars, was to have taken place soon. The friends of the murdered man were not satisfied with the verdict and accordingly took the law into their own hands, and strung both men up. While there is no doubt that the men received their just desserts, it would have been better to let the law take its course. As it is, the state of Minnesota has suffered a disgrace that it will take years to obliterate.

HENRY TRIMBLE AT LAST EXCAPES THE DREADED GALLOWS.....

Henry Trimble, who was held in the Wahpeton jail awaiting trial for the murder of G. K. Hagen, at Wolcott, last fall, was found dead in his cell last Saturday morning. He had retired as usual Friday night, but between that time and Saturday morning he took a belt which he wore, and tying one end of it around his neck and the other to a bar across the door of his cell, succeeded in strangling himself. When found life was extinct. The coroner held an inquest and the remains were interred that afternoon.

The story of the crime for which he was awaiting trial is familiar to all News readers. After the murder of Mr. Hagen, he escaped to Montana, but it is said that a strong desire to see his family drew him back to the scene of the murder. He made a desperate attempt to escape, but was taken and lodged in jail. Some time ago he attempted to take his own life by opening an artery in his wrist, but was discovered before it was too late. He had a fearful horror of the hangman's rope, and probably fully realizing that there was no hope of escaping the penalties of murder when he was tried he took this way of escaping the gallows. His trial was set for next week.

INSTANTLY KILLED.

Chas. H. Ward, news agent on the Soo train, was run over and instantly killed in the Hankinson yards last Saturday evening at 6:30 o'clock. It seems that Mr. Ward came over past the stores to dispose of daily papers, and did not get back to the depot in time to catch the train. However, he made an attempt by running up the track, probably thinking that when the train stopped at the Great Northern crossing he would be able to get aboard. But this was not to be, so he jumped onto the caboose of a freight train that was backing up to the depot from the Oakes line. As near as can be learned he stood upon the lower step of the caboose with one hand hold of the railing, when the engineer took up the slack, the sudden jar throwing him down between the caboose and the next freight car. Several cars passed over his body just above the hips, crushing out life instantly. The remains were taken charge of by the town authorities and removed to the town hall, where they were prepared for burial, and sent to Minneapolis Sunday.

Upon examination it was found that not even the skin on the man's body was broken where the wheels ran over him, although every bone was broken and mashed. His right arm was badly smashed, and the fingers of the left hand broken.

Mr. Ward had been running on this train all winter, and was a most gentlemanly fellow. His home was in Minneapolis, where a wife and two children live to mourn the sudden and tragic death of the husband and father. It is not known whether or not he had any life insurance.

WILLIAM TYSON.

He was of Norman-English ancestry. Gilbert Tyson, a Baron of England, was one of the Chiefs of William the Conqueror, Duke of Normandy, who conquered the Britons in the 8th Century of the Christian Era.

The stone castle of Alnwick and its lands in the north of England, comprising the best part of Northumberland County, were given by the Conqueror to Gilbert Tyson for his services in the invasion.

These war like principles of the Norman founder were displaced in his English descendants by the teachings of George Fox and William Penn by the principles of Peace.

To enjoy these undisturbed, Ryner Tyson, with others of the Society of Friends accompanied William Penn to Holland in the seventeenth century and from thence to Pennsylvania, where Ryner Tyson founded the American branch of the family.

His descendant, Elisha Tyson, the philanthropist of Baltimore, Maryland, was the grandfather of our subject. His father was William Tyson, (Sr.) a prominent miller of Baltimore, proprietor of Woodbury Mills, and later a clerk for thirteen years in the Treasury Department at Washington, D.C. His mother was Elizabeth Tyson, nee Ellicott, of the family of that name which built Patapsco-Ellicott Mills in 1772 to 1774, now Ellicott City, of 5,000 population. These mills were in operation two years before the Declaration of Independance. They shipped flour over seas in their own ships. Andrew Ellicott, her brother, by the appointment of President Washington, surveyed and laid out the Capital of the United States.

William Tyson, our subject, was born November 4th, 1807, in the city of Baltimore MD. He was the first child of William and Elizabeth Tyson. He had twelve brothers and sisters, all of whom with himself, were well educated in and near their native city. William also learned from his father the milling trade. At various times he carried on mills in Maryland, Indiana and Illinois. In 1840, on April 16th, he married Mary Jane Allen, daughter of Robert and Elizabeth Allen, of Fawn Grove, York County, Pennsylvania. The ceremony occurred according to the customs and rules of The Society of Friends, in the presence of the Society at Oldtown Meeting House, Baltimore, MD. His age was then 33 years and his wife's age 26 years.

He engaged in general business on his own account at Woodbury and Marblevale, MD. He carried on milling, storekeeping, and quarrying and sawing marble for the Baltimore and general trade.

In a few years, however, the expenses exceeding the profits, he closed out the entire plant, and removed to York, Pennsylvania, where he engaged in storekeeping. Here his two oldest children, Robert Allen and Lewis Allen, were born. Finding it more congenial to his taste and education to teach, he entered that profession at York Springs, PA, where his two next children, Elizabeth Ellicott and Samuel Ellicott, were born.

Afterwards removing to Berwick, Columbia County, PA., he there became principal of the Academy of that place. His fifth child was born here and named Elisha Edward.

While he resided here the war with Mexico occurred. In 1848 he removed his family across the Alleghany mountains to Richmond, Indiana, and thence to near Center-ville, where he engaged in milling. Here the sixth child was born and died. It was named Charles Shoemaker Tyson. He afterwards conducted mills at Milton, Wayne County, Indiana, and at Nulls Mills, Fayette County, which mills he owned. Selling them he bought an 80 acre farm near Huntington, Indiana, where he removed with three teams in midwinter.

His sons here farmed and cleared land and marketed walnut timber, while William engaged as miller a few miles away.

While here in 1860, the war for the Union began. To this great struggle for Liberty and Union, William Tyson gave four sons and his farm, and re-engaged in teaching at Maple Grove, near Huntington, Indiana. Here death invaded the inner sanctuary of his home and robbed it of the precious wife and mother, leaving desolate the heart of her loving husband and the hearts of her weeping children. She was then 49 years of age in 1864. At the close of the war, to which his dear wife was really a sacrifice, through anxiety and care, William removed his children to Irvington, Illinois, to a farm of 200 acres, leased for two years for wheat raising by his sons. He continued teaching till very recently. Many youths of the land in all walks of life were helped in morals and wisdom by his instruction. At his death he was probably the oldest teacher (being nearly 90 years old) in the Union. He bore his last sickness with Christian resignation. He expired at 5:20 A.M., May 22, 1897. At the closing scene he left messages of love to all his relatives and friends, both near and far. His last sentence was uttered in a joyful triumphant tone, several times repeated, "I'm going home to mother!"

"How blest the righteous when he dies!
When sinks a weary soul to rest,
How mildly became the closing eyes,
How gently heaven the expiring breast!"

"Farewell! conflicting hopes and fears,
Where lights and shades alternate dwell,
How bright the unchanging morn appears,
"Farewell! Inconstant world, "Farewell!"

The friends of the deceased met at the home of his son Robert A. Tyson at 4 P.M. Monday May 24th. The casket was adorned inside and out by a profusion of beautiful cut flowers, tastefully arranged, gifts of the ladies of Hankinson and the neighborhood, his sorrowing relatives and friends. Rev. George S. Bascom, pastor of the Congregational Church at Hankinson, officiated. He read the above sketch of the life and ancestry of William Tyson and preached an eloquent and appropriate sermon from the text in Numbers "Oh that I may die the death of the righteous, and that my last end may be like His."

Afterwards the large concourse of friends visited the patient sleeper for the last time and he was gently borne away to the Tysonvale Cemetery, where he was affectionately interred on the east side of the green grove, planted years before by his own hands. Thirty four conveyances brought the people to the obsequies.

The heartfelt sympathy of the bereaved families of his children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren are extended to all kind friends who assisted them in his sickness and in performing the last sad rites.

DEATH BY SUICIDE

GEORGE MACHEEL SHOOTS HIMSELF IN THE HEAD....INSTANT DEATH

The citizens of Hankinson were startled and shocked last Saturday evening shortly after six o'clock to learn that George Macheel had shot and instantly killed himself. The story of the affair is a sad one, and well known to all residents of Hankinson. He had been drinking very hard for three days, and crazed by whiskey, went home Saturday evening with the evident intention of killing the whole family. Securing a revolver, he drove his wife and children out of the house and then went up stairs. From there he fired once or twice through a window at Mrs. Macheel, who was running from the house, but the shots did not take effect, although she fell to the ground from fright. Probably thinking he had killed his wife, he turned the revolver on himself and sent a bullet crashing into his own brain. The shot entered the throat, and taking an upward course, lodged in the base of the brain.

Not knowing that her husband had ended his earthly career, Mrs. Macheel swore out a warrant for his arrest, and when Marshal Schroeder went to arrest the man, the awful deed was discovered. The County Coroner was at once notified and the result of the inquest showed facts practically as given above. The funeral services were conducted at the house at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon, and the remains interred in their final resting place in the German Lutheran Cemetery.

George Macheel, in his calling as a contractor and builder, had proved himself an excellent workman. When sober, not a better natured or more congenial man could be found, but while under the influence of liquor he seemed to lose his reason. His family had suffered much on account of this.

The wife and seven children, five of whom were his step-children, and his brothers and sisters, have the heartfelt sympathy of the community in his sad and tragic end.

JUNE 10, 1897.....

The trial of the Indians for the murder of the Spicer family is progressing. The chances are good for all five to take active part in a necktie social. If the jury fails to convict them of murder in the first degree, and they are not sentenced to hang, it is feared that a mob will simply lynch them. Nearly all the population of Emmons County is taking in the trial, and indignation runs as high now as at the time of the crime.

JULY 1, 1897.....

In the trial of August Normand at Grand Forks for the murder of one of the Hilsted boys, the jury, after disagreeing for about forty hours, finally gave a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree, and placed the punishment at life imprisonment. The sentence was a surprise to many for if ever a man ought to hang this Normand should be the one. However, he has yet to be tried for the murder of the other boy, and he will probably get the sentence he so richly deserves.

BISMARCK TRIBUNE.....

It is generally trusted in Grand Forks County that the jury in the next Normand case, will fix the punishment at hanging. But, if so, a complication will arise. Under the verdict reached last week he will have to be punished by imprisonment for life. If the jury fixes his punishment at hanging, the question arises, will he have to serve out his life sentence first? If so, hanging will have a few terrors for him. If, on the other hand, he is condemned at the next trial to hang, and is hanged, how can he serve out his first imprisonment? The matter is _____ dged either way. How much easier it would have been to have hanged _____ and sentenced him for life afterward...

JULY 22, 1897.....

What is this country coming to anyway, when such men (?) as Normand, the Larimore murderer and ravisher, get off with a life sentence, instead of being made to suffer the penalty proscribed by law for such a criminal as he is? The crime for which he was tried, with which our readers are all familiar, was one in which justice could only be properly satisfied by the infliction of the death penalty. But the demands of justice, for some cause, were apparently overlooked, with the result that one of the worst murderers in the northwest goes to Bismarck to spend the remainder of his life.

FORMAN, ND., APRIL 12th.....Yesterday afternoon about four o'clock, a son of William Hurley, Editor of the Sargent County Independent, was accidentally shot and killed. The boy, who was about six years of age was playing with another brother a couple of years older. The older boy climbed into a buggy in which there was a loaded gun lying in the bottom of the box. The younger brother followed him but while climbing over the back end of the buggy, the gun was, in some manner, accidentally discharged, the charge passing through the box and the boy's body. The members of his family are particularly attached to one another and this sad occurrence leaves them nearly distracted with grief.

THE CLOSING CHAPTER OF THE LIFE OF ONE OF OUR NEIGHBORS...

The Chicago Chronicle says:

"Beneath his service hat and soldier clothes, which are hanging on a dusty wall, lies the remains of Albert Echdoh, Private in Grigsbys' Rough Riders. The bier is of pine and the pall is a grimy oil cloth. Surrounding the dead soldier are boxes and buggies and wagons, and the paraphernalia of a livery stable."

"The body of the man who fell beneath the wheels of a trolley car at Forty Seventh and Throop Streets a week ago remain unclaimed in the back room of Kenny's Morgue, 5432 Halsted Street. No one watches over it. The body lies in a corner of the room, and the employees of the stable wash their buggies and mend their harnesses, with scarcely a thought of the man who offered his services for honor of his country."

"Albert Michael, who was with Echdohl at the time of the accident, says he made every possible effort to communicate the death of his companion to the relatives and friends of the dead soldier, but he has not succeeded. Trooper Michael has been visiting his friends, who live at 4732 Throop Street, and he says he has spent all his money in trying to locate some one who would claim the body.

"Kenny, who holds the body, says he has exhausted all means of locating the relatives of the soldier. And during all this time the undertaker has not placed the body in a coffin, nor has he removed it to a place more fit for the dead. He says the expense attached to such a procedure is the cause of this neglect. So in the dingy stable in the rear of his shop lies the troopers body.

"I have done my best to find the relatives of the soldier, but without avail," said Kenny yesterday. "If I can obtain permission from the Coroner I will bury the man tomorrow in Greenwood Cemetery. Of course the surroundings of the body are not elegant, but it is the best I can do, and I will receive nothing for telegraphing and embalming."

"When Trooper Michael was told that the undertaker would receive nothing for the expenses of a funeral he said that when the clothes of his dead companion were searched $52 was found in the pockets. He says this will go towards paying the expenses of a funeral"

Echdohl was a resident of Lidgerwood, where he was employed in a hardware store. Some time ago he was engaged to an estimable young lady there, and a short time before the wedding suddenly disappeared. He returned about six months later, and under shotgun influences, married the girl who was about to become a mother. The child was born, and later Echdohl enlisted with Troop G., leaving his wife and baby. Mrs. Echdohl met another man, is said to have fallen in love on sight, and instituted divorce proceedings from her husband. Service was made by publication, and the divorce action was to have come up on the day the news of his accidental death was received in Lidgerwood. Echdohl knew nothing of the proceedings, and was on his way home to wife and baby, when he met his sad death.

The dead man has no connections at Lidgerwood, aside from his wife, which probably accounts for no instructions being received from there as to the disposition of the remains."

DEATH OF W. H. SHIPE.

HE DIED VERY SUDDENLY SUNDAY MORNING OF HEART DISEASE.....

Like a flash of lightning from a clear sky came the sad intelligence Sunday morning that W. H. Shipe was dead. The news spread very rapidly through the village, and cast a deep gloom over all citizens. The death was so sudden that the news could scarcely be credited, but it was true, and he who had mingled with us a few hours before, and then apparently in his usual health, had been called to his reward.

For some time past Mr. Shipe had been troubled with his heart, but the disease had not kept him from attending to his business. At times he had had fainting spells and it was in one of these that death came. On Sunday morning about 7:30 o'clock he complained of not feeling well and sat up in bed a few minutes, when the trouble came on and he fell back, and before a physician could be summoned, had passed away.

The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at the house, Rev. W. H. Gimblett officiating. A large delegation of the lodge of Woodmen of the World, of which Mr. Shipe was a member, were in attendance to pay the last tribute of respect to their deceased brother, as were also many friends. The interment took place in the Hankinson Cemetery.

William Henry Shipe was born June 28th, 1846, at Mooreburg, PA. He was married to Angelina R. John on December 8th, 1868, at Shamokin, PA. In 1879 he came to the northwest, locating at Minneapolis, and became one of the firm of the Wilford & Northway Mfg. Co.

On Sept. 19, 1890, Mr. Shipe came to Hankinson and in company with J. J. Jones started the Richland Roller Mills, which interest he disposed of in 1895. In the spring of 1896 he, with M. A. Wipperman, bought out the hardware and furniture business of Upham & Sprague, in which business he was interested at the time of his death.

During the nine years of Mr. Shipe's business career in Hankinson all who had dealings with him found him to be upright and square dealing, and he made a host of friends by whom he will be greatly missed. He leaves a wife and two sons, George E. and Samuel J., to mourn his demise. To these and other relatives the NEWS unites with many friends in extending most sincere sympathy in their hour of bereavement.

CARD OF THANKS

MURDER OR SUICIDE ?

Harry Ellis Found Dead In A Buggy Near Wilmot, South Dakota...

News was received here yesterday morning that Harry Ellis, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Ellis, who live south of town, had been found dead in a buggy near Wilmot, SD. When discovered Ellis had one end of a halter around his neck, and the other was fastened to one of the buggy braces. The horses had been unhitched from the wagon and turned loose. Particulars of the sad affair are difficult to obtain.

There is considerable question as to whether it was a case of suicide or murder. The first impression was suicide, on account of the position of the body when found, but, on the other hand, he might have met with foul play and this means taken by the murderer or murderers to throw suspicion toward suicide. Ellis had started to prove up on his claim and had considerable money with him at the time of leaving Hankinson Sunday evening. One thing that cannot be accounted for is what he was doing in that section of the country.

His untimely end is a sad blow to his parents, sisters and brothers, and they have the sympathy of the entire community in their affliction.

.....INSTANTLY KILLED.....

A FORMER HANKINSONITE MAN HAS HIS HEAD BLOWN OFF

News was received here last week of the accidental death of Benjamin Waterhouse, a former resident of this place, at Verndale, MN. Deceased was a brother of William, Albert, David and Thos. Waterhouse, all well known farmers living near town, two of whom...William and Albert...attended the funeral. The following account of the accident we clipped from the Verndale Sun of the 19th inst.

One of the worst accidents in the annals of history of Wadena County occurred on the Robt. Clark farm in Wadena township one and a half miles south of Verndale, Monday morning at about 10 o'clock.

Benjamin Waterhouse and his two sons, Albert and James, had went onto the premises with their horse-powered wood saw for the purpose of sawing a pile of wood for J. O. Richardson, the present renter of the farm, and after getting the machine in position had but fairly commenced work when, without the least warning, the huge iron balance wheel broke into a dozen pieces. Ben Waterhouse was on top of the power driving the four teams engaged in furnishing power, and facing the saw. A piece of the flying wheel struck the unfortunate man nearly between the eyes, tearing away the upper part of his skull, scattering his brains right and left. The lifeless body toppled over backwards to the ground, and the life light of Benj. Waterhouse had gone out forever.

As soon as the excited horses could be stopped willing hands lifted the lifeless remains from nearly beneath the horses' feet and tenderly conveyed them to the family home a half mile south. Dr. Reid was summoned but his services were not needed other than to make the wound as less ghastly as possible.

Benj. Waterhouse was an old resident in these parts, having resided here for the past fifteen years and was a hard working farmer. He leaves a wife and four children as follows: James, Albert, Julia and Ella, all of whom were nearly grief stricken.

Employed about the machine was J. O. Richardson and two men from near Hewitt and how all escaped injury, besides the dead man, is a mystery. The piece of iron that killed Waterhouse struck the roof of the house about four feet down from the weather strip with such force as to go through the side next to the saw and on through the eastside of the roof, and up to this time has not been found although search had been made by several parties. Another piece went the opposite direction and crashed through two sides of a barn built of inch oak boards, and it too has not been located.

Still another piece went into the air and in coming down struck on top of the buggy shed and cut through two inches of oak boards. Not enough of the wheel was left on hub to indicate that there had ever been any wheel. The machine had been in use since 1892 and this had been the first break which indeed was a serious one.

The funeral services were conducted at the residence south of the city yesterday afternoon and a large gathering was present to listen to the last sad rites as performed by Rev. Manly.

STORY OF MRS. HARGRAVE'S DEATH.

ACCOUNT OF ACCIDENT AND FUNERAL AS GIVEN BY SOUTH DAKOTA PAPERS

Last Saturday morning, A. D. Mower received a telegram from his daughter, Mrs. Hargrave, of Hankinson, ND., to meet her and two children at Watertown in the afternoon. The daughter was coming on a visit and to participate in a family reunion to be held at the Mower home in Clear Lake. In accordance with the telegram, Mr. Mower secured a livery rig and drove to Watertown. He met his daughter and children and drove back to Clear Lake, arriving here about 10 o'clock Saturday evening. Upon stopping at the house he alighted with his young grandson and supposing that his daughter was out of the carriage he took a grip, went to the porch, rapped on the door and returned to assist the daughter.

He then discovered the daughter had not alighted and the rig had turned around and was moving off toward main street at a brisk trot. Of course the old gentleman shouted and ran after the team but his voice was husky from the fright and natural nervousness and the carriage vanished in the darkness. The rig was seen by many pedestrians who thought merely that the driver was reckless and had no idea it was a runaway with a timid, nervous lady and baby sitting helpless and apparently dumb with fright in the rear seat. When the covered carriage had traveled two blocks and was passing on the south side of Lavin Bros' store, Mrs. Hargrave evidently jumped to the hard street and was soon found in an unconscious condition. The babe was uninjured and was soon cooing and laughing in the arms of loving friends. The team trotted around the next block and was stopped just south of the Advocate Office and could have been easily stopped several times along the route had it been known there was no driver.

The unconscious lady was taken to her father's house and physicians summoned, who agreed that the case was hopeless. A severe bruise on the back of the head was the chief injury. All during Sunday and Monday till about six o'clock the poor woman lay in the same comatose state and then death came. Mr. Hargrave was notified and came as soon as possible. He arrived but twenty minutes before his wife breathed her last.

The remains were taken to Brookins yesterday after funeral services at the house. This accident is one of the saddest events we have ever known and the hearts of all our people are deeply moved in regret and tenderest sympathy for the mourning ones.....Clear Lake(S.D.) Advocate, May 31st.

The funeral party which accompanied the remains of Mrs. John Hargrave from Clear Lake yesterday consisted of Mr. Hargrave and son, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Mower, Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Mower, Mrs. Wm. Wood, Mr. and Mrs. George Simmons, Miss Lora Mower and Willie Mower. The remains arrived about 5:15 last evening, and were received at the home of D. H. Campbell by members of the A. O. U. W. and a number of friends. The procession to the cemetery formed there, and at the grave a short service was conducted by Ref. Jennings.....Brookins (S.D.) Press, May 31st.

,....Fatal Accident.....

JAMES MONROE, a Soo Brakeman, Killed in the Yards Here Saturday Morning....

Another victim has been added to the large number who suffer violent deaths in railroad service.

Last Saturday morning James Monroe, a brakeman running between Hankinson and Oakes, was fatally injured by falling under the engine and died a few hours later. The accident occurred just as the Oakes train was coming in from the west. Young Monroe walked along the sideboard of the locomotive and stepped into the pilot to turn the switch at the west end of the siding just opposite John R. Jones' residence. It had rained during the night and the engine was wet and slippery.

While the train was still in motion he attempted to step off but slipped and fell under, the small wheel passing over one leg just below the knee, his left hand and one finger of his right hand. A number of persons were standing on the depot platform at the time and witnessed the accident, among them J. W. Hargrave and E. S. Merrifield, and ran down to where the poor fellow was lying. He was picked up and taken immediately to the hospital where Doctors Spottswood and Coleman amputated the leg below the knee and the left hand at the wrist. The shock of the accident and loss of blood had been too great, however, and as he came from under the influence of the chloroform the unfortunate young man expired.

Before he died an effort was made to secure the name and address of his people, but he seemed reluctant about giving the desired information. It was known that his parents lived in Iowa but all efforts to locate them were futile, and the remains were interred in the cemetery east of town Monday afternoon after a funeral service at the Congregational Church conducted by Rev. W. H. Gimblett. Little was known here of the deceased as he had been running on the Oakes branch of the Soo for only three weeks. Previous to that he had been running from Oakes west to Braddock for a short time, and altogether had been railroading for about a year.

He was a pleasant, quiet young fellow, well liked by his associates, but had little to say of his life before entering the service of the Soo.
